THE ANCESTRY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN

By J. HENRY LEA and J. R. HUTCHINSON. Special Edition of 1000 copies. Illustrated in photogravure. Quarto, $10.00, net.
Postpaid.

In this novel and important contribution to Lincoln lore, Mr. J. Henry Lea, an American genealogist of distinguished record, and Mr. J. R. Hutchinson, an English worker in the same field, have collaborated through a considerable term of years to trace the ancestry of our greatest President to his earliest English forbears. Their results are surprising. By the aid of a fortunate find in the records of the English Chancery Court they have been able to trace the English ancestry of President Lincoln four generations further back than it has ever been carried before, and have likewise brought out many new and important facts concerning his ancestors in this country. The book is a fine example of sound genealogical research, and, with its elaborate tables and its copious appendices of hitherto unpublished documents, of court records, wills, etc., etc., is a mine of historic lore. It is much more than this, however. The collaborators have told the story of the life of the family through ten generations with surprising vividness and effectiveness, and have produced a volume as readable as it is instructive. Particularly notable is the masterly analysis of Lincoln's inherited traits, and the defence of the character of his father, with which the book concludes

The volume is richly illustrated with views and old prints of scenes and buildings connected with the Lincoln family in England and this country, with facsimiles of documents, seals, autographs, etc., all reproduced in photogravure. It is handsomely printed and bound in a style which makes it practically a companion volume to the recent book on Lincoln by Schurz and Bartlett.

WHEN LINCOLN DIED, AND OTHER POEMS

By E. W. THOMSON.

(Ready in March)

Here is a volume of poetry which even a public ordinarily inattentive to verse cannot afford to neglect. Mr. Thomson, a Canadian by birth, but an American by long residence in this country and understanding of it, is one of the ablest and most representative poets of the Anglo-Saxon union. This collection of his work, composed largely of poems that have had a highly successful appearance in such periodicals as the Atlantic Monthly, Collier's Weekly, etc., is a volume that should appeal strongly to all virile minded readers. Mr. Thomson is an accomplished master of poetic style, of melody and poetic phrase, and his poetry is notable among contemporary volumes for the vivid life that moves in it. His narrative poems of the Civil War have at once an engrossing interest of narrative and an elevation of poetic tone that make them memorable, while his two poems dealing with Lincoln, "When Lincoln Died" and "We Talked of Lincoln," belong with the finest poetry that has been called out by the character of the great American. Other sections of the volume contain poems embodying the Canadian spirit, which have enjoyed a wide success in Canada and in England, and there are some fine miscellaneous and engaging pieces in lighter vein. The volume as a whole is one whose publication is an event.
